2023 ANNUAL REPORT

Our vision for every child, life in all its fullness.
Our prayer for every heart, the will to make it so.

FOREWORD

In 2023, when the government lifted pandemic restrictions, all sectors began to work toward reviving the economy and life "as usual". World Vision has also been actively exploring new avenues for more high-quality funding.

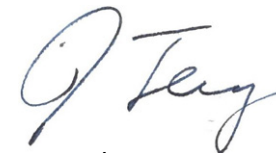

This year, we used drama to promote child protection in rural areas; we launched the "Inconvenience for 1 Hour" campaign, where participants experience the challenges faced by those with disabilities; we continue to pursue excellence by improving our services for vulnerable children and increasing our program's effectiveness.

This year, we shared our project experience and impact in two vision-sharing events. We successfully applied for grants from the European Union, the Hong Kong SAR government, and other corporations to continue serving children in need and responding to those affected by disasters.

This year, we hosted some special guests: a research group consisting of representatives from Jiangxi's Public Security and Civil Affairs departments, the CEO of World Vision Hong Kong, leaders from World Vision International and East Asia Region, and our board members. We are grateful that they have taken the time to visit our projects and share their valuable suggestions with us.

This year, we remain committed to serving vulnerable children through child protection and development, migrant children, health, water and sanitation, disability inclusion, relief, and rehabilitation programs.

This year, we are grateful for the government departments, partners, donors, and supporters who enabled us to continue working with children despite a challenging year. Thank you for journeying with us.

World Vision China

In 1982, World Vision responded to the Qinghai flood disaster and expanded our work in China with the support of the central government and other levels of government. The China office was established in 1993 to further our mission in community development and other humanitarian efforts.

Under the Law of the People's Republic of China on the Administration of Activities of Overseas Non-Governmental Organizations in Mainland China, World Vision China registered representative offices in seven provincial administrative regions. We work with governments, social organizations, and communities to serve children in need and improve the well-being of children in China.

In 2023, World Vision offices supported our project funding of CNY 50,076,680 (USD 7,186,124). Monthly donations from Hong Kong and Macau donors contribute nearly 80% of our funding. We are accountable to our donors through annual internal and external audits, working with diligently selected partners, and our commitment to bringing sustainable change to the vulnerable children we serve.

OUR INNOVATION

Serving children the children's way

Education or community theatre is a form of applied theatre. It is not the conventional stage performance or movies we see. It uses performance to promote growth and practical learning. "It uses play; children naturally learn and thrive when fun is involved. That is why we chose to use this method to engage with them," says a World Vision staff member specializing in applied theatre.

On August 13-19, 2023, World Vision worked with the township government and village committee to organize a seven-day summer camp in Suichuan County led by World Vision staff members. They discussed three topics with the children and chose "love at home" and "kindness in school" as their final performance themes.

13-year-old Zhang and 29 children participated in the summer camp. "My best memories are during rehearsals. I play two roles - a father and a child in "Love at Home". I'm satisfied with my performance. I get excited and have the urge to laugh, but I always manage to hold it in. I will do my best during our performance on the last night," Zhang says.

On the evening of August 19, the children performed at the basketball court of the township government building. They put up two plays called "Love at Home" and "Kindness in School" and received applause for their hard work.

Sharing their inconvenience

This year, World Vision collaborated with people with disabilities to launch the "Inconvenience for 1 Hour" campaign. Groups of participants such as corporations, organizations, friends, or even a hiking club can join this activity to experience the "inconvenience" and daily challenges faced by people with disabilities and champion an equal and dignified barrier-free environment.

Participants draw from 20 characters with different disabilities or temporary disabilities, safety officers, or robots. Each character has a personality trait, disability, and a list of tasks to complete. These characters were designed by people with disabilities based on their experiences. Participants must apply a physical restriction while completing the tasks set. For example, a person with visual impairment would put on a blindfold, or a person with mobility restriction would tie their legs or hands.

Through the activities, participants gained a first-hand understanding of the difficulties encountered by people with disabilities. A participant shared, "I got the role of a blind person. I appreciate my health and physical ability after taking part in the campaign. I felt nervous and hesitant during the experience. I could not find the tap to wash my hands, and eating wasn't easy. It felt cumbersome."

"I can imagine a time when no one is around to assist them. They probably feel anxious but also worry about burdening others when using the stairs or public transport," another participant shared.

As a final part of the activity, participants will share an action they will take to help build a barrier-free environment.

World Vision is committed to delivering high-quality and sustainable funding. In addition to organizing vision-sharing events to introduce our work and experience, we also explored other channels to find more resources.

Sharing our program impact and experience

World Vision organized two vision-sharing events this year to introduce our work with children with disabilities and support communities' access to clean water, sanitation, and hygiene. Guests listened to first-hand testimonies about how we respond and bring sustainable changes to communities in need, helping them further understand our work and encouraging them to support and partner with World Vision.

European Union program funding

World Vision Netherlands, World Vision China, and Safe Kids China jointly launched the "Halt and avoid unintentional injuries among children, through strengthening of CSOs and ensuring gender equality and disability inclusion" (HaiZi) project, funded by the European Union. This project aims to reduce the mortality and unintentional injury incidents among children under 14 in Western China by improving the capacity of local social organizations.

Hong Kong SAR Government Disaster Relief Fund

In July 2023, heavy rainfall and floods caused by three successive typhoons hit China's northern and northeastern regions. World Vision successfully applied for CNY 5.13 million from the Hong Kong SAR government Disaster Relief Fund to assist people affected by floods in Shulan and Yushu in Jilin Province. This is the second time World Vision applied for funding from the Hong Kong SAR government, after we received over CNY 2.2 million for our Jiangxi flood response last year.

Deputy Secretary and Deputy Director of the Jilin Provincial People's Congress Standing Committee and Mr. Tian Jinduan, President of Jilin Charity Federation, met World Vision China representative and the Hong Kong SAR Government Liaison Office team from Liaoning. They also accepted donated goods to assist people affected by floods.

Eight years partnership with Kohler

Since 2016, Kohler, a global kitchen and bath design brand, has been journeying with World Vision to improve children's health in rural areas by delivering safe water. For the last eight years, Kohler's generosity has reached seven provinces, including Guangxi, Guizhou, Hebei, Hunan, Jiangxi, Shaanxi, and Yunnan. With their support, we constructed and improved sanitation facilities in schools and communities. We built water systems, child-friendly handwashing stations, sewage systems, and water purifiers, making sanitation facilities accessible to everyone. Besides that, we also conducted behavior change communication to improve hygiene awareness and practices.

From 2016 to 2023, Kohler-supported projects were carried out in 21 villages and 29 schools, impacting over 45,000 people.

April 2023

World Vision is committed to serving the most vulnerable children with humility. We welcome leaders, industry experts, academics, and donors to visit our projects and share their valuable feedback so that we can continue to provide better services to the children we serve.

OUR GUEST

A research team of representatives from the Jiangxi Public Security Department and Department of Civil Affairs visited World Vision projects in Suichuan County, Shicheng County, and Nanchang City on April 18–21. In addition to learning about our programs in the area, the team also sought to understand the challenges faced and facilitate dialogues between the local government departments, working partners, and World Vision to create mutual understanding and enhance our cooperation.

The delegate recognized World Vision China's contribution to social development in their visited areas. It emphasized working by the law. They also gave some input, including the suggestion for World Vision to expand project area coverage and resources in Jiangxi to include areas of national concern, such as revitalizing rural areas, children's mental health, and improving parent-child relationships. As an international NGO with vast experience, they hope World Vision will continue innovating, promoting successful project models, and introducing high-quality and professional technical programs.

May 2023

From May 21-27, Ms. Amy Fung, the CEO of World Vision Hong Kong, was in Shaanxi Province to visit early childhood development, disability inclusion, migrant children, and other child-focused development projects carried out in Yangxian County, Suide County, Xi'an City, and Yulin City.

"I remember every face I met during the trip; whether it was a World Vision colleague, a government official, our working partners, or service groups, everyone is a witness to the achievements and significance of our work. I still remember a colleague named Xiao Duo who shared that after completing a home visit, she would inevitably sigh because she felt she had not done enough to help the children and their families. I believe many of us share the same sentiment, but it can also motivate us to keep improving and not give up," says Amy.

Finally, she quoted Mother Teresa to encourage everyone, "Not all of us can do great things, but we can do small things with great love."

July 2023

On July 24-28, World Vision International Chief Field Operations Officer, Dr. Jean Baptiste Kamate (JBK) World Vision East Asia Regional Leader, Ms. Terry Ferrari, visited Xi'an City and Longxian County in Shaanxi Province to see the progress of our disability inclusions, children's center and WASH projects.

"Our visit was successful and memorable! I was most impressed by World Vision China's program focus on the most vulnerable children, such as those with special needs, their partnering approach, which emphasizes adequate partner involvement, and their strong staff capacity. I also enjoyed all the food I tasted during the visit! Thank you so much, World Vision China, for your hospitality!"

August 2023

On August 15-18, World Vision China's board members visited projects in Guangdong and Jiangxi. They spent time interacting with the children we serve to listen to their feedback and suggestions about World Vision's work. The board members who were part of the trip were Mr. Patrick Tak Kuen Nip, Mr. Patrick Chor Wah Ng, Ms. Helen Hing Lun Tang, and her family.

World Vision would like to thank everyone who visited our project and contributed to our work in serving children in need to ensure they are growing up healthily and happily.

Children participating in World Vision's project in Guangdong share their interests and give feedback about the program activities.

World Vision is committed to helping the most vulnerable children. In 2023, we continued to serve children's needs, mainly through our child protection and development projects, working with migrant children, improving access to health, water and sanitation, disability inclusion, and providing disaster relief and rehabilitation.

OUR IMPACT

Child protection and development

In 2023, World Vision carried out projects such as the "Establishing Child Protection System in China", "Guarding the Future", and "It Takes a World to End Domestic Violence against Children" (EVAC) to equip child directors, welfare supervisors, social workers, and local NGOs to identify, report, respond, refer and manage child protection cases. We also continued the EVAC campaign with a new series called "Happiness between Grandparents and Grandchildren" to raise public awareness, support grandparents in improving their relationship with grandchildren, and reduce intergenerational misunderstanding so that more children will grow up in a harmonious family environment. The "Safe to Learn" project supports schools in setting up feedback boxes and helplines, developing procedures, and enhancing teachers' capacity to handle bullying incidents. We focus on helping children and their caregivers access adequate support services.

World Vision advocates for the protection and development of infants and young children. In 2023, we expanded the reach of the "Go Baby Go" project to cover early childhood education institutions, healthcare systems, villages, communities, and hospitals to support new or young parents. This is to begin cultivating child protection awareness and practices during children's early years of development and help create positive and nurturing environments for them. Children are not passive recipients of the services provided but can actively contribute and advocate. Life skills training allows children to participate in issues affecting them, support their peers, and meaningfully contribute to society.

Highlights of our projects include:

28,907 children increased their awareness and ability to protect themselves.

6,022 children in children's groups built their confidence and acquired skills to serve their peers and communities.

5,483 child welfare workers serving at least 90,000 children trained to protect and assist children threatened by violence.

19,203 parents trained in positive parenting to reduce children's risk of experiencing domestic violence.

STORY

Zhouzhou takes a new leave

Zhouzhou is in the fifth grade. He used to be known as a troublemaker who often insults and hits students who are smaller than him. His classmates often walked away from him, like a mouse avoiding a cat.

Under the World Vision-supported "Safe to Learn" project, the school launched a campaign with the theme 'Stop bullying in school'. The campaign included class meetings, posting messages on bulletin boards, and gathering signatures to support anti-bullying, calligraphy, and drama competitions. Zhouzhou gradually realized his bullying behavior through the campaign and stories his teacher shared in class. He began to change his attitude to stop bullying others. He even took the initiative to work with others to complete small tasks.

"During the activities, I realized how harmful bullying is; it can have long-term or even lifelong effects and made me realize how scary and horrible I was in the eyes of others. I did not want to bully others anymore and began to learn to get along with my classmates."

Zhouzhou believes that he will become better. "I thank my school for sharing this knowledge with me. It has enabled me to see what a bully I was and change my ways."

Migrant children

World Vision supported our local partners in programs to serve migrant children. The project uses education and the exchange of experiences to transform children's support systems. This includes working with communities through activities such as summer camps, children groups, and thematic workshops to engage with migrant children and help them improve their mental well-being, ensure they are well-integrated into their community, and teach them life skills and how to protect themselves. Secondly is to strengthen children's support system, which consists of their families, schools, and community, by organizing parenting workshops and knowledge and experience exchange sessions, equipping families, teachers, and community social workers to better care for migrant children, protect them, and effectively respond to their development needs.

In 2023, our migrant children's programs in Guangxi, Guangdong, Jiangxi, and Shaanxi directly impacted the lives of 5,558 people.

海珠共青团就在你身边

Highlights of our projects include:

4,660 migrant children participated in activities that helped them develop and protect themselves.

170 caregivers trained in positive parenting and child protection.

573 community members equipped to support migrant children's development, including safety and encouraging them to participate.

STORY

Zhenzhen blossoms

"My daughter talks much more and is learning to share her thoughts. I should encourage her to participate in more community activities." Zhenzhen's mother reveals this to a social worker one day.

When ten-year-old Zhenzhen joined community activities, she was afraid to speak. She never volunteered to answer when social workers asked questions. During the story-telling session, she had to pause each time it was her turn to read. But her mother realized how vital and fun these activities were, so she kept bringing Zhenzhen and her younger brother. The social workers also created opportunities for Zhenzhen to share her thoughts, and she gradually began to gain confidence in speaking. She even volunteered to lead the city exploration camp. Social workers also counseled Zhenzhen and her mother, as they had different personalities and opinions. This helped them build a willingness to listen and understand each other.

After participating in community activities, Zhenzhen's mother saw her become confident and independent. She reflected on her parenting style and admitted she had overlooked Zhenzhen's development and was overly strict with her. She realized she should be more patient to listen and give her children the space to grow.

Health, water and sanitation

World Vision is committed to bringing sustainable change to improve children's health and the environment. We conducted health education to raise children's and parent's hygiene awareness and reduce their risk of infections and injuries. We supported the construction of safe drinking water systems, sewage systems, bathrooms, and handwashing stations in schools and communities. We also distributed toolkits and set up experiential rooms in education centers for child injury prevention training. Children and parents learned to avoid injuries caused by road accidents, drowning, falls, and other child safety information. This would help build safer environments for children in their homes and communities.

In 2023, our health, water, and sanitation programs directly impacted the lives of 26,521 people.

Highlights of our projects include:

605 people trained in handwashing techniques, managing common diseases for children, and personal hygiene practices.

6,175 people live in improved and hygienic environments.

225 people have improved sanitary toilets to use in their schools.

1,136 people attended child unintentional injury prevention educational activities (especially in traffic injuries, drowning, and falls).

20,078 people live in safer environments with fewer hazards.

STORY

Our Toilets are Clean!

12-year-old Xiaoqiao studies in a mountainous area. The toilets in the school used to be old dry toilets with no flushing system. Whenever Xiaoqiao finished using the toilet, he had to carry a bucket of water from outside. The urinals were shallow trenches, and urine would soil onto the legs of their pants. The lack of partitions meant they did not have privacy, and boys had to stand shoulder-to-shoulder while using the urinals, which made Xiaoqiao uncomfortable. The sinks outside were no better. Water always splashed off the simple countertop, wetting Xiaoqiao's shirt. He often avoided using the toilet unless it was an emergency.

Everything changed when the new semester started. There was a beautiful bathroom building with clean toilets. Boys had separate urinals, they no longer had to worry about dirtying their pants, and there were partitions to protect their privacy. The new flush toilets prevent the accumulation of fecal matter, eliminating foul odors and flies. Xiaoqiao said excitedly, "Now everything gets flushed away with just a push of the button, and we do not have to use a bucket to fetch water anymore."

Xiaoqiao got even more excited when he saw the new handwashing station. The beautiful sinks stop water splashes, and there are soap and hand sanitizer to use. The school also conducted health education activities. Xiaoqiao learned the seven-step handwashing technique and what to do if he has diarrhea or pneumonia.

The new toilets have improved the school's sanitation and helped children protect themselves from illness, a gift that will lead them to a healthier future.

◉ Xiaoqiao washed his hands using the seven-step technique he had just learned at the new handwashing station.

◉ Xiaoqiao stands in front of the newly built toilet, feeling proud because his school environment is improving.

Disability inclusion

World Vision's disability inclusion projects in Guangxi, Shaanxi, and Tianjin expanded to Guangdong, Jiangxi, and Jilin in 2023. We strengthened our collaboration with local government departments, orphanages, healthcare centers, rehabilitation centers, special education institutions, schools, social service agencies, and communities. Our projects focus on supporting children who have multiple vulnerabilities, such as orphans and children with disabilities in rural areas with difficult access to adequate care and resources. We find comprehensive interventions to support their equal and meaningful participation in society.

Project achievements:

Urban and welfare institutions: We developed and promoted a Standard Rating Scale for the Care and Protection of Children, supported child welfare organizations to use an integrated service model that covers "parenting, medical care, education, rehabilitation + social work", supported partners to develop a "Vocational Education Curriculum Manual" and established a "training base", supported social workers and rehabilitation centers to increase sex education classes for children with disabilities, and encouraged youths with disabilities to share their suggestions to help improve public transport and employment guidance services.

Rehabilitation services in rural communities: Supported the establishment of community rehabilitation services in rural areas; promoted the collaboration between sectors and experts to support individual case management, enhance existing systems, and improve local vulnerability factors, so that children with disabilities in remote mountainous areas can access services.

In 2023, our disability inclusion program directly impacted the lives of 6,372 people.

Highlights of our projects include:

2,188 children can access quality rehabilitation, education, and social work services.

845 social workers and caregivers caring for 1,092 children trained in child protection and sex education for children with disabilities.

1,057 caregivers learned to care for children with disabilities.

926 children received support to participate in community activities.

Linlin goes to school

Linlin is a little girl with multiple disabilities. She is eight years old and attends first grade. For the past few years, Linlin went to a rehabilitation center supported by World Vision. When it was time for her to start primary school, the project team developed a plan for Linlin to prepare her physically, mentally and academically, ensuring she can take care of herself and adapt to her new environment. They also worked with her parents on the application and ensured everything was ready. Today, Linlin is enjoying her time in school. Her parents shared, "Linlin has learned to sing and dance, and her speech is improving. She does not hide behind her father and is smiling and laughing more."

A happy little rabbit

I am Xiaoqin. My family includes my parents, brothers, and sisters. Although we are not well off but we have always been happy as a family. My father passed away because of a sudden illness this year, which caused more challenges in our lives. My mother cannot speak and communicates with sign language. My siblings and I still attend school, so my oldest brother came home to herd sheep to support our education. We live in a cave room. The other two rooms are old and we let the sheeps live in there. This year, with the support of the Charity Federation and World Vision, we were able to repair the two rooms and fix the roof. They installed a drinking water system, and boys and girls have their rooms. They also brought in a rehabilitation teacher from the county to teach me and other children to care for ourselves and adapt to school life. During the summer, they brought my siblings and I to Xi 'an City to attend a camp. We learned a lot and made many new friends. My older sister was very happy. She told me we must study hard to grow up and be like the teachers we met here. But I want to be a happy rabbit when I grow up. I will always listen to my mother and help my brother take care of the sheeps.

Relief and rehabilitation

This year, World Vision organized training, nurtured and supported local social organizations to provide communities and families with knowledge and skills in disaster risk reduction; assisted communities in enhancing their disaster preparedness by forming volunteer teams, drawing community risk maps, organizing drills and updating their emergency response plans; and carried out a series of activities for children, such as earthquake simulation, visits to fire brigade stations, wilderness survival, and first-aid skills, to raise children and their families' disaster awareness and self-protection capabilities. These activities mobilized the participation of social organizations, communities, and families to create a safer environment.

World Vision conducted disaster risk reduction capacity-building in Jiangxi and Tianjin, helping 34,990 people enhance their disaster prevention and mitigation capabilities.

Highlights of our projects include:

26 local NGOs trained in disaster risk reduction.

10 communities conducted drills and updated their disaster preparedness plans.

375 children and 508 parents and caregivers trained in disaster preparedness and self-protection.

Learning how to escape an earthquake together

When it comes to escaping an earthquake, children have different ideas; some say we must run as fast as they can, and some say they have to save their pets. Some say the bathroom at home is the safest place during an earthquake. So, what is the correct way to escape from an earthquake?

After an explanation by an expert from the Earthquake Bureau, everyone learned that earthquakes are a natural phenomenon that occurs on the surface of the earth. Although we cannot predict when an earthquake will happen, everyone can understand how to protect themselves and their families. The teacher told the children to stay calm during an earthquake and that the most important thing to do is to find safe shelter away from windows, mirrors, and other objects that could fall. The teacher also showed the children the correct position to lie down and move quickly and safely toward the shelter.

As part of the training, the children also experienced a simulated earthquake. When the teacher shouted that there was an earthquake, everyone moved quickly and took shelter according to what they had learned earlier. Through this training, children understood the importance of earthquake evacuation and their responsibility to protect themselves and others, to apply what they had discovered in real life, and to help others when necessary. Finally, they set up a community safety group to conduct regular training and drills to help everyone learn to cope with emergencies such as earthquakes.

"We are partners" is one of World Vision's core values, where we seek to work with like-minded partners to build a better future for children. World Vision is grateful to the Public Security Department, Professional Supervisory Units, and all our partners. Thank you for working with us to change the lives of vulnerable children in China. We hope every child will live life to the fullest.
